Friends of Trees, PGE and the City of Tualatin Team Up to Plant Trees for Earth Month
In honor of Friends of Trees' 30th Anniversary, PGE donates $100,000 over the next five years

Portland, Ore. – This Saturday, April 13th, Friends of Trees volunteers will plant more than 1,000 trees and native shrubs in Tualatin with longtime partners Portland General Electric (PGE) and the City of Tualatin. PGE employees, including Maria Pope, PGE's President and CEO, and their friends and family will be planting alongside representatives from the City of Tualatin and its Mayor Frank Bubenik, and community members.

This year the Friends of Trees' planting season marks its 30th anniversary as the organization was founded in 1989. The season will wrap up in May with more than 100 tree-planting and tree-care events across the region. PGE has supported Friends of Trees since its founding in 1989. PGE is sponsoring a total of 10 planting and tree-care events, bringing the total of PGE-sponsored plantings to more than 100 since 2005. This year, PGE announced a special gift of $100,000 that will help Friends of Trees reach its milestone of one million trees planted since its inception.

"PGE has a great partnership with Friends of Trees. It gives us the opportunity to make a significant impact on our beautiful state and contribute to the sustainability of our community," said Kregg Arntson, director, Corporate Social Responsibility at PGE. "PGE is happy to be a part of one million trees planted and bringing our communities together to reduce carbon, strengthen neighborhoods and improve the environment."

Friends of Trees executive director, Scott Fogarty, praises the partnership, "Friends of Trees can't plant 50,000 plus trees and native shrubs every year without the support of sponsors like PGE. Their support, since our founding, has been key in our ability to plant 800,000 trees and native shrubs, to date, with tens of thousands of volunteers. We are just thrilled that PGE's donation will help us get to the incredible milestone of one million trees planted by our 2023-24 planting season."

Fogarty continues, "Community tree planting events make a significant contribution to our region's livability, improving our air and water quality, cooling our neighborhoods; further, not only do trees help make us healthy, volunteering also improves human health!" Fogarty concludes, "Friends of Trees will be out this weekend, and every Saturday from October through April, throughout the region, planting trees with community volunteers. We plan to plant more than 50,000 trees and native shrubs this season, which is significant for a number of reasons, not the least of which is carbon offset: One young tree can absorb 26 pounds of carbon."

The City of Tualatin is another longtime Friends of Trees partner. This year marks the 21st year that the City has partnered with the organization, explains Jackie Konen, volunteer program manager for the City of Tualatin. Konen furthered stated that "the leadership and support that Friends of Trees supplies enables the City to plant over 8,000 native trees, shrubs and pollinator friendly plants in Tualatin parks and greenspaces. Tualatin has been designated a Tree City for 32 years meeting requirements for planting restoration sites with volunteers and having a robust street tree program. Last year, 1,500 volunteers contributed 6,500 hours to keeping Tualatin green and growing."
